

Tech Labor Organizing

Heila Precel

The goal of this paper is to examine labor organizing in the tech industry. First, a brief survey of U.S. labor (from the 18th century to the modern day) is conducted. Next, labor organizing is described specifically in the context of the tech industry. Longform interviews are conducted with three students entering the workforce about their preconceived assumptions and ideologies around organizing. These interviews are synthesized and summarized in the paper. Finally, recommendations for future organizing that would encourage participation by new tech employees are described.